In addition to the above list of books we have purchased of the publishers the New International Encyclopedia, six volumes of which have arrived and are catalogued; the remainder will be sent monthly as they are published until the full number, seventeen volumes, are received. It is, of course, the latest and in our judgment the best, publication in the line of reference books, and no doubt the subscribers will fully improve the opportunity to avail themselves of the privilege.

Owing to increased expense and the small appropriation of last year we have been unable to make necessary repairs to damaged books, otherwise we consider the library in good standing.

THE REPORT OF THE SCHOOL BOARD.

The financial condition of the district is satisfactory. Although no school money was raised last year in addition to that required by law, we have been able to pay all bills, and have left in the treasury a balance of $298.60. The nominal balance in the treasury at the beginning of the financial year was $731.28, but $333.33 of that sum was at once paid to Pembroke Academy in accordance with the vote of the school meeting, leaving an actual balance of $397.94 with which to begin the year.

The opening and maintaining of an overflow school on Broadway for the fall and winter terms occasioned an extra and unlooked for expense of more than $200. If it had not been for this extra expense our balance this year would have been larger than our true balance last year. The amount of school money required by law to be raised is sufficient to pay all the ordinary school expenses of the district.

No overflow school is likely to be kept this spring, but it is very probable that one will be required for the fall and winter terms. If it is, more money will be needed. We therefore recommend that the district raise the money needed for repairs and not use the school money for that purpose.

The union with Pittsfield for a supervisory district has been continued and the superintendent re-engaged at a salary of $1,000. Each town pays half his salary and has half his time, and the state reimburses the town one half this expense, so that the net expense to Pembroke and Pittsfield is $250 each. We believe this to be money well spent.

Electric heat has been introduced to prevent freezing of the water closets in the village schoolhouse. It has worked well, except in the extremest cold weather, and with the addition of a little more heat will, we hope, prevent freezing altogether.

Owing to the enforcement of the compulsory attendance school law our village schools became so crowded last fall that it became necessary to open another school. A room was procured in Mr. Hartwell's house on Broadway and fitted up for a school, and Mrs. Grace Lancey engaged as teacher. This school was continued through the fall and winter terms.

The condition of the schools is fully shown in the superintendent's report which is herewith submitted.

ALMON F. BURBANK,
SAMUEL D. ROBINSON,
GEORGE W. FOWLER,
School Board.

REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT.

To the School Board and Citizens of Pembroke the Second Annual Report of your Superintendent is herewith submitted:

One year ago you were watching your schools in order to ascertain whether the benefits to be derived from a system of supervision would prove equivalent to the additional tax burden that must be sustained to support it. At that time all innovations were considered with hope and any misgivings that you may have had were loyally kept in the shadow. To-day, after a trial of five terms, there can no longer be any doubt as to the merits and demerits of having some one directing and responsible for the work of your children from the first day to the last of their school life.

Whatever there is in the work of the past weeks that is proving beneficial the schools themselves will bear witness, and I leave the matter to your judgment, knowing that it will be just. In so doing, however, I am aware that the persistency with which parents have absented themselves from the school life of their children is not wholly favorable to a fair and intelligent decision, for there are many things that point toward much improvement in the future that might escape the notice of non or infrequent visitors.

Excluding all holidays and institute recesses, I have passed eighty-five and one half days in the different schools the past year, making eight and eleven twentieths days per school, or two and seventeen twentieths a term. Of this time the rural schools have received rather more than the grades, for it is the mixed school that offers the most perplexing problems to teacher and superintendent.

Examinations have been set each term, the questions so arranged as to test not only the pupil's memory but his growth in reasoning power. Practically each class has been before me in recitation once each month and some of them oftener. By thus conducting the work I have been able to come into close touch with every class and for the most part with every individual, thus enabling me to make such helpful suggestions as lie in my power.

The subject of reading has been thoroughly threshed out in the lower grades and I am confident that the present system, embracing the word, sentence, letter, and phonic methods, will prove satisfactory and in most cases develop intelligent readers so that there will be no complaining when these pupils reach the upper grades or go from our schools. Under the present efficient teaching force the work has far exceeded the most sanguine hopes of one year ago. We have used six primers, five first and five second readers where formerly only one was read. This gives the pupils more experience in recognizing words as well as greater knowledge of objects. I think that the amount of reading should be extended.

Spelling is closely related to reading in the lower grades. With the present system of phonetic drills and syllabication, I feel safe in promising that there will be little need to bemoan the deplorable state in this branch. In fact, there is much improvement already in the upper grades. Yet in spite of all we can do some wretched students of orthography will always be with us.

Certainly much of the mystery is gone from the study of geography. There is no longer a "Great American Desert" to explore in imagination. Nor are there foreign countries containing unknown animals and unfathomable wealth. Because of this much of the poetry is gone from this important branch. We do not cry out over this but look for some other means to stimulate interest. I believe that we have been doing the work satisfactorily this year. It is surely better than that of last. New books will be needed another fall for those in use are badly worn. I have devoted much time to selecting a suitable series.

A different historical series is desirable if the best work is to be done.

I have spoken of these changes here because the demand is larger than usual in any one year. Your liberality in the past is unquestionable and the School Board has met every one of the numerous demands promptly and ungrudgingly.

The system of vertical writing has left us some very good things, especially in the lower grades, but in the upper classes the process becomes slow and tedious. Commercial schools recognize this and so must the common school. We have been using a medial system this year and with it much practice of exercises for the development of muscular power in the fore arm and fingers as well as the control of the same.

The study of music has been continued much the same as last year, but with more emphasis on sight reading. In the lower grades we have been using Howard's Sight Lessons.

We have so long associated in our minds education with books exclusively that it is difficult for us to realize that there is a vast education with which books have nothing to do. Education should bring all the powers of mind and body to maturity and give them the highest efficiency. Manual training offers much that is educational, but in considering it we must keep clearly in mind the distinction between manual training and the teaching of a trade.

Pembroke cannot now offer a course in manual training of Sloyd, but drawing can be given and add much that is beneficial to every pupil in the schools. Such hand work is not to be substituted for book study, but used supplementary. The children have time for it and it will enliven the work of each day, stimulate the mind to greater activity, and create a love for the beautiful and respect for the products of the hands.

We have done what we could the past year, but before the pursuit of this branch can be followed with satisfaction it will be necessary to employ a teacher fully competent to direct the work. The services of such a person from six to eight days each month will meet all requirements admirably.

I believe that I am voicing the opinion of a majority of the parents sending children to school in advocating the giving of such instruction. I know that the teachers agree that the schools require it, and some have expressed a desire to aid in securing assistance the past two terms.

Last June saw the graduation of eight pupils, one of whom is yet with us. Another closing time will probably see the graduation of three more. This is, indeed, a small number to complete the work, and much more deplorable since there are so few boys in the upper grades.

There are 254 pupils enrolled the present school year; of these seven are residents of Allenstown. No child is under five years of age, and only nine over fifteen. The average attendance is 177.8, with 271 tardinesses. The average percentage of attendance is 87.7. These figures do not include those who have escaped enrollment for all or a part of the time.

I leave it to you to decide whether this is good or bad. This much I will say. When money is placed in the hands of a school board they have a right to expect that the voters enter a contract to have the children present. So it is with the teacher. She enters a contract to be at her post of duty so many days and hours, and the children are under obligation to be present unless something unusual occurs. Each one of you can answer whether your child or children has fulfilled the contract.

We have tried, with written excuses and a requirement to make up work lost, to remedy this evil. The result is, "Please excuse Blank for being absent," when as likely as not the boy or girl was somewhere having a good time. A school teacher should not be held responsible for what a child does not know when that child has been needlessly absent.

Nine schools have been maintained throughout the year, and one more during the fall and winter terms. The reason for opening the tenth school is that the lower rooms at Suncook were crowded with pupils, and not only this, but the ages of the children were such that they could not be worked together with profit. Children of from ten to fourteen years of age cannot study with those of five and six with justice to either children or parents. I did not need to recommend a segregation of these pupils. A report to the board was sufficient, and a room was fitted up in the Hartwell house on Broadway and a school opened which has enrolled 27 pupils and at no time has had less than 18. This school may not have to be maintained during the spring.

Twenty different persons have been employed in the schools. This is too great a number for the best of work, but it has been unavoidable. In only three schools has the same teacher been employed throughout the year. In speaking of the teaching force I can say, regretting the misfortunes that attended the Buck Street assignment last fall, that each teacher has grasped the situation and carried the work on with success.

The expenses necessary to keep the school buildings in good repair are small, and will be for the coming year. The Suncook building has been wired for electricity, and four thirty-two candle-power lights kept burning in the basement day and night since early in the winter term. Something had to be done to prevent the freezing and clogging of the water pipes. The arrangement is only partially satisfactory. Steam heat for the whole building would be an improvement.

The Buck Street and Pembroke Street houses need renovating inside. It would be well to do this now instead of waiting until there are heavier repairs to be made.

In closing I urge every citizen at least to visit the school of his locality, so that each may know for what the school moneys of the town are expended, how they should be, and what return is given on the investment to the future citizens of the state and country.

FRANK HOWE BENEDICT,
Superintendent.
